LIQUID HELL IN CHEAP SALOONS

(Continued from Page One.) tain saloon keepers are selling their chemically prepared "whisky" as the unadulterated article, but so far the authorities have been unable to place their fingers upon any specific case. But to the average patron of the Palama saloon the word "whisky" has but one meaning, and whether "bottled in bond " or "compound," the

"booze" is all one to him. Under the present laws, a rectifier's license entitles a saloon keeper to dispense a brand of poison which kills ultimately just as surely as does car-bolic acid, strychnine or corrosive sub-limate. clan of this city, are directly traceable to the rank poison which is sold to the ignorant patrons of the cheap dives.

The chief stock in trade of the rectifier is a little pure whisky, a supply of fusel-oil, some browned sugar of doubtful variety, cheap alcohol, some flasks, and some highly ornate labels, inscribed "Mount highly ornate labels, inscribed "Mount LOlympus Whisky (a compound)" or some such lettering. Twenty five cents will buy enough of this brand of booze to provide the average man with a three days jag, and about the third bottle is likely to qualify the consumer for a choice corner for in Potter's Field.

QUARTET OF CARD SHARPERS IN TOWN

Between four and five hundred dollars is the amount cleaned up, it is reported, by a quartet of card sharps who were among the passengers for Honolula on the Pacific Mail steamship Mengolia arriving here Monday, Fellow passengers with the quartet are quite frank in their beliefs that the young men were on the boat largewho had money and would get into a game, but when the frisky game of game, but when the frisky game of poker was proposed the passengers gen-erally fought shy. A good many felt that when any one of the four sug-gested poker that it savored to much of sharping to come.

The inevitable bridge whist was generally played on the voyage, however, and the quartet managed to work into games. The stakes were increased as the days sped by and when the final accounting took place the quartet were ahead and about everybody olse was a loser. Some of the passengers on board state that various members of the quartet inquired of Honolulans how the gambling game was regarded in Hano-lalu, and from questions like this they were regarded as mea who were on the way here for the purpose of sixing up the town.

The names of the four are known and have been handed to the puller for and have been handed to the pales for reference. Professional gambles have not fared well in Honolula. The famone Hilly Hurtt who managed to get in and start up a gambling house in Pu-nahou district where the rooms were maken district where the rooms were fitted with all manner of signaling devices for the benefit of fillip's sitterain, was exposed by The Advertiser and Hilly made a hasty exit. The most recent exposure was that of a young follow named Clarke who conducted his operations in Walkiki.

The suspicious of Mongolin passengers have been handed on to the local hand twome.
